Information for the Fudan MBBS Program

An English-Taught Undergraduate Medical Program

Program Overview

According to the “Provisional Regulations on Quality Control Standards of English-Taught Medical Undergraduate Education for International Students in China,” the Ministry of Education of China has approved Fudan University as one of thirty universities in China permitted to enroll international students in English-taught undergraduate programs in medicine.

To promote international education, Fudan University began enrolling international students in the English-taught undergraduate medical program in Fall 2008. The program aims to produce high-caliber medical graduates with solid medical knowledge, competent clinical skills, and professionalism, while giving due consideration to the possible needs for them to serve in countries outside of China. Graduates of the program will have the ability to work in medical and health institutions, making meaningful contributions to the areas of patient care, education, and research.

The program is taught completely in English and follows the principles of consolidating academic knowledge, with emphasis on technical skills, interdisciplinary studies, and clinical practice.

Offered by the Shanghai Medical College of Fudan University, this program is open to international students intending to pursue the science and practice of medicine. Students who excel will have the opportunity to participate in overseas clinical internship programs. After completing the required number of credits, students will be conferred a diploma from Fudan University, and qualified students will receive a degree of Bachelor of Medicine and the Bachelor of Surgery (MBBS). Graduates will have the opportunity to register for medical licensing exams in accordance with the requirements of the relevant regulatory bodies of the countries in which they choose to practice.

Master of Arts in Chinese Language and Culture
Medium of Instruction: English

Academic Year: two years for degree program; one semester or one year for non-degree program

Introduction:

Chinese Language and Culture is a two-year full-time English-instructed Master of Arts (MA) program as a subfield of the major Chinese Philology, conducted by the Department of Chinese Language and Literature (DCLL) since 2008. As opposed to teaching Chinese as a second language, this program offers multiple lenses to help students notice, learn, and understand phenomena in the field of Chinese language and culture, using the theories and research methods taught in class. Our research scope focuses not only on ancient Chinese culture, but also on modern and contemporary China. It starts with the approach of linguistics, but also shares many similar characteristics to social science. It is not a long-term language course, but a gateway via the linguistic channel to an in-depth understanding of multiple aspects of China and Chinese society.

Academic staffs of the DCLL have earned national and international recognition for their academic achievements in the disciplines of Chinese linguistics, philology, literature, folklore, etc. Their research does not just restrict to the Chinese language and literature, but involves comparative studies on remarkable works from all over the world. Supported by these successful scholars, seven classes of MA students have completed their study and graduated from the department.

After class, we organize different types of events, in order to provide our students from different cultural backgrounds with opportunities to get to know each other, to find their pals for on and off campus activities, to share their experiences in their study and life here at Fudan University and in Shanghai, etc.

We hope you will be successful with your study and enjoy the life at Fudan University. See you in the next September!

Application Requirements:

1. Bachelor's Degree: Applicants are required to hold a Bachelor's or higher degree granted by an accredited college, university or other recognized academic institution after a four-year undergraduate study (or equivalent). Generally, applicants graduated from related disciplines are more appreciated, but other applicants with evidence of their excellent study and research ability in the field of Linguistics and social sciences are welcome as well.
2. English Language Proficiency: Applicants are required to submit an International English Language Test System (IELTS) report with overall 6.5 points or above, or Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) report with no less than 90 scores. Applicants who are native speakers of English language or previously have graduated from a purely English-instructed program (with proof) are exempt from this requirement.
3. Statement of Purpose: Please write up a one to two-page personal statement explaining why you plan to study this program at Fudan University and what you have prepared for the study already, and then talk about your future study plan (what new you still need to learn, what research question you are going to explore, etc.);
4. Resume or Curriculum Vitae (CV);
5. Recommendations: Applicants also need to submit recommendation letters from at least two professors in related disciplines;
6. Writing Sample(s): Applicants must submit at least one writing sample around 2000 words to show their ability of academic writing. The topic of this paper does not have to be related to Chinese language and literature;

In terms of specific requirements for documents used in the online application system or hard copies to mail to us, please follow the guideline for application on the website of International Students Office (http://iso.fudan.edu.cn/).
Criteria of Course and Credits

Graduate includes 27 credits from courses and 3 credits from graduate thesis. The thesis should be written in English and not less than 20,000 words.

Brief introduction to some compulsory courses:

Chinese Language and Culture

This course introduces the basic speech sounds, grammar, social factors, dialects of the Chinese language and a selection of important topics of Chinese culture such as beliefs, art, education, food, festivals, etc. It is not assumed that students know the Chinese language; however, they will be required to try to analyze some basic Chinese language data and discuss cultural issues in classroom together with the teacher. Also, students need to take the open-book final exam on Chinese language, and to give a presentation on one topic of Chinese culture or cultural comparisons.

Chinese Arts

This course involves a survey of Chinese arts. In both of its ancient and contemporary forms, such as painting, pottery, bronze vessel, painting, calligraphy, and film. Emphasis will be given on the inner spirits of the relationship between Chinese arts and Chinese philosophy. Since often mythology coins a nation's cultural identity, even if in the unconscious level, the course will start its journey from Chinese mythology. The first part of this course will mainly discuss Chinese painting to show how the transcendent as well as secular spirits intertwine the life of Chinese intellectuals.

Considering we live in an age of globalization and consumer society, however, contemporary Chinese popular culture will also be discussed among which the re-mapping of urban space will be a major topic. By "French Theory in China," this course will trace its Chinese reception back to the happy 1990s when China was benefited from "open policy" and began to embrace Western culture through the "Americanization." Nevertheless, French theory is not a version of Parisien fashion, of which only the newest are appreciated. Since late 1990s, cultural studies of CCR have become a new hegemonic discourse in its Chinese context. The course will display how Chinese academic tendency transmits from "theory" to "culture" finally.

Contemporary Pop Culture in China

Chinese popular culture cannot be properly grasped without the immersion study of what ordinary Chinese people thought, felt, believed, and acted. We will take a generic approach, asking the basic question of what the Chinese people do with their typical forms of popular culture, such as fashions, popular literature, film, television, music, opera, food, religion, Internet life, etc. We will examine these forms of popular culture primarily from the perspective of their political, ideological, sociological, cultural, and psychological functions. The seminar will focus on 1990s and 2000s PRC popular culture. These subjects will be approached through both written and visual documentation. Students will be expected to do field trips and perform local investigations on the Chinese environment in addition to the weekly readings and discussions.

Aesthetic Chinese Culture and Tradition

The course gives a brief survey of ancient Chinese culture and tradition, including the natural and human environment, political history, religious beliefs, literature, and idea systems. It also gives some discussions on both external and internal narratives which were often shaped and overshadowed as Chinese cultural characters and traditions. As kinds of recognitions of Chinese cultural identity, some ancient texts are preserved, and some orthodox perspectives and subtle details from beginning through recent time are questioned. In the meantime, some other views from neighboring people and western world are argued and treated with some respect in the reasonable evaluation system. The students who take this course should have comparative perspective and balanced judgment, and are always willing to understand China with the calm and rational eyes.

Chinese Literature in the 20th Century

This course will focus on the study of Chinese novels, poetry, drama in different styles in the 20th century, and some leading Chinese writers will be read in the class, including Lu Xun, Yu Dafu, Mao Dun, Bai Jin, Lao She, Cao Yu, Shen Congwen, Mao Yushi, Si Tong, Yu Hua, Wang Anyi etc.

The Introduction to Chinese Newspapers

This graduate level course is designed to introduce the history, theory and practice of contemporary Chinese newspapers. Topics including the legacy of Chinese newspapers, relevant media policies and regulations, the commercialization of Chinese newspapers, working patterns for different news genres and media professionalism will be addressed. The course focuses on discussing the developments and challenges for Chinese journalism within a society undergoing a profound transformation. This course will be conducted with lectures, seminars, presentations and discussions.

Tuition Fee: RMB25,000 per semester

Fudan-Paris1 Double Degree Master Program in World Economy (Globalization and World Economy) in English

1. Brief Introduction

The faculty of economics of Paris 1 Pantheo-Sorbonne University and the school of Economics of Fudan University, which are leading Economics Departments in France and China, have joined their efforts to initiate an Innovative Double-Degree Masters International Program in Economics specialized in Globalization and World Economy.

This program, starting in 2008, trains Chinese and non-Chinese economists who will become key experts in Euro-Chinese economic relations.

2. Duration of the program

This integrated master program stretches over two years. Students are required to spend their first academic year (3 semesters) at Université Paris 1 and the second academic year (2 semesters) at Fudan University.

3. Program Structure

Year 1: The first academic year (fall, spring, and summer semesters) will be organized in Paris 1 starting from October. For the first two semesters, students will be enrolled in the PSHE program. Only students who successfully complete the first two semesters will be allowed to continue. For the third (summer) semester, they will be offered classes specifically organized for them, corresponding to core courses offered in the regular 2nd year program of the Master in Economics specialized in globalization economics.

China’s participation in the world economy also opens important opportunities for trade, investment, and international cooperation to promote world prosperity and stability.

Doing Business in ChinaLi Binyuan, Associate ProfessorShanghai National UniversityCredit: 2; Hours: 32
This course aims at introducing students to the business environment in China, with a focus on the economic, legal, and cultural aspects. The course will cover topics such as market structure, competition, and regulation, and will provide students with a deeper understanding of how to conduct business in China.

Capital Markets in ChinaShiu-Di Huang, Associate ProfessorShanghai UniversityCredit: 2; Hours: 32
This course discusses China’s capital market and financial system, based upon a unifying and analytic framework of financial market theory, monetary theory, and the role of monetary policy in the economy. By learning this course, the students are expected to learn basic economic principles of money, banking, and financial markets and develop an in-depth understanding of the capital market in China.

MicroeconomicsLi Dan, Associate ProfessorDonghua UniversityCredit: 2; Hours: 32
Economics is the study of how society deals with the problem of allocation of scarce resources among competing uses. Every economic system must answer a few central questions, e.g., what goods to produce, how much of each good to produce, how to produce them, who gets the goods, etc.

MacroeconomicsGe Jingfeng, Assistant ProfessorSt. John’s UniversityCredit: 3; Hours: 48
The level of this course is intermediate microeconomics. Macroeconomists are interested to know how far the standard model can explain consumption, investment, unemployment, business cycle, economic growth, money demand, etc. The objective of this course is to explain some basic principles of macroeconomics which are obtained based on a robust framework. In the end of the course, students are supposed to learn how to use basic models, and how to map from theory to reality.

International FinanceHe Xu, Assistant ProfessorTexas A&M UniversityCredit: 2; Hours: 48
This course studies issues such as the balance of payments, real and nominal exchange rate determination, and macroeconomic policy in open economies.

Foreign Direct Investment in Transition EconomyZuo Changrui, Associate ProfessorWuhan University of Economics and Business AdministrationCredit: 2; Hours: 32
This course will explain the motivation and effects of FDI in host countries. The course consists of two parts, namely general categories and special issues. For the first part of general categories, we will review FDI’s role in economic growth and technological progress. For the special issues, we will focus on inward and outward FDI in China. In this part, the first 5 sessions will discuss facts and effects of outward FDI in China. The last session will turn to inward FDI in China.

Industrial OrganizationZhou Yu, Assistant ProfessorUniversity of Michigan, Ann ArborCredit: 2; Hours: 48
The purpose of this course is to expose students to topics and techniques frequently discussed in industrial organization literature. The first half will cover single-agent dynamics and market dynamics.

Development EconomicsWu Yu, Assistant ProfessorUniversity of VirginiaCredit: 2; Hours: 48
This course covers some of the critical issues in recent development economics literature and introduces a variety of methodologies to study these issues. It draws on analyses of broad range of research papers and emphasizes the coupling of theory and empirical methods. The goal of this course is to transform students into researchers who can conduct independent projects related to economic development.

New Political Economics in ChinaLin Baikun, Assistant ProfessorUniversity of VirginiaCredit: 2; Hours: 48
This course includes 16-18 lectures. We will discuss some economic theories and empirical evidence on national and state, government, and bureaucracy in order to understand the conflict and balance of interests in different levels. These theories are connected with China’s history and current affairs.

Advanced Topics on Chinese EconomyZhang Jian, ProfessorFudan UniversityAnd Other Guest ProfessorsCredit: 2; Hours: 32
The objective of this course is to make students understand China’s economic transition and development, focusing on the role of government as well as the market. The course runs for sixteen weeks with sixteen topics in fall semester and has two academic hours every week.

Urbanization in ChinaWang Zhi, Assistant ProfessorBrown UniversityCredit: 2; Hours: 48
The goal of this course is to give students an understanding of how to apply the latest thinking and research in economics to analyze a series of topics related to urbanization in China.

General Information

Program Overview:
The EMA in Chinese History and Culture is a two-year study program which aims to provide opportunity for international students without prior knowledge of the Chinese language to study Chinese history toward a Master’s degree in Shanghai, one of the most exciting cities in China. All courses except Chinese language courses under the program are taught in English by our highly qualified faculty.

Courses in the program consist of three blocks:
1) Chinese language courses for different levels;
2) general surveys of ancient and modern Chinese history;
3) in-depth research courses focusing on art and religion in ancient China, history and culture of Shanghai, comparative perspectives on Chinese and other ancient civilizations.

For those who are able to follow courses in Chinese they can also choose from a wide range of courses taught in our department. Students in the program will have a unique opportunity to studying Chinese history and culture while experiencing it in person.

Degree and Non-Degree Study:
For students who pursue a Master’s degree, a minimum of two years is generally required in order to complete the program. They will be required to complete a total of thirty-one course credits and a dissertation written in English of no fewer than 10,000 words. The dissertation should be defended successfully before being submitted with an abstract in Chinese.

While developed mainly to fulfill requirements for a Master’s degree, our program also accommodates for those who wish to follow our courses for any length of period from one semester onwards with no intention of obtaining a degree.

Once admitted, every student, degree or non-degree, may choose a faculty as his or her supervisor according to his or her research interest with the help of our EMA coordinator.

Courses:
A degree student is required to complete requires students to complete thirty-one credits (including eight credits for Chinese language courses, twenty credits in history and culture and three credits for academic activities) during two academic years and successfully defend their Master thesis. He or she may make a course plan with the help of his or her supervisor.

Non-degree students may take courses in the light of requirements in their home institutions.
Department of History, Fudan University Shanghai
English-Taught Master Program (EMA) in Chinese History and Culture

The main courses in our EMA program include:

- Elementary Chinese: 4 credits
- Intermediate Chinese: 4 credits
- Advanced Chinese: 4 credits
- Chinese Civilization to 1800: 3 credits
- History of Modern China 1800 to Present: 3 credits
- History of Chinese Culture: 3 credits
- Chinese Art and Archaeology: 3 credits
- Religion and Society in China: 3 credits
- History of Chinese Medicine and Science: 3 credits
- Encounters with the West in Late Imperial China: 3 credits
- History of Shanghai: 3 credits
- Women and Society in Modern Shanghai: 3 credits
- Comparative Studies of Ancient Civilizations: 3 credits
- Comparative Mythology: Greek and Chinese: 3 credits

Living on Fudan Campus:
Almost all of the 9,000 students at Fudan University live on campus, which means that they have many opportunities to associate with each other. International students are provided with accommodation with reasonable charges.

Standard double room costs CNY55 per day per person for long-term students and CNY70 per day per person for short-term students.
Standard single room costs CNY80 per day for long-term students and CNY100 per day for short-term students.
All rooms come with private bathroom, air-conditioning, telephone, and Internet access.
Foods in student canteens on campus is inexpensive with typically around CNY50 per meal.
The price is only for reference and is subject to change.

The price is only for reference and is subject to change.

Admission and Application

Eligibility
For Degree Students:
Eligibility is the result of comprehensive academic work and shall show ability to pursue a graduate program in the chosen area.

For students who have completed the equivalent of a four-year Bachelor of Arts or Bachelor of Science degree from an accredited college or university prior to the beginning of the semester, application must be made.

For students from non-English speaking countries, a test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) score of 90 or higher, or an International English Language Testing System (IELTS) score of 6.5 or higher, is required.

Application should be submitted between December 1 and April 31 of the following year for the entering degree program. If the applicant plans to apply for the scholarships, he or she must submit the application before February 19.

Non-degree students
Non-degree students may begin the fall semester in September or the spring semester in March. For the fall semester, the application should be submitted between September 1 and November 30.
Admission decisions will be posted on http://sof.uchicago.edu during late June to early July of each year, and the welcome package, including a letter of admission, a Foreign Student Visa Application Form (Form JW202), and other guides will be sent to the applicants.

Applicants should bring the letter of admission, the completed Foreign Student Visa Application Form (Form JW202) to the Chinese embassy in the country of residence or the nearest Chinese consulate-general for the X or F Visa.

(Note: Applicants should retain the original Form JW202 themselves. The Chinese embassy or consulate-general only requires a photocopy)

Applicants must register at the Department of History with the letter of admission and the Foreign Student Visa Application Form (Form JW202) no later than the registration deadline indicated in the letter of admission. Late registration without prior approval will not be accepted. They must also purchase the insurance for international students (CNY 800 per person per year) approved by the Chinese Ministry of Education to cover their medical costs as part of their registration.

Available Scholarships to degree students:

The Chinese and Shanghai government scholarships: they cover the tuition fee or tuition fee, on-campus accommodation and living subsidy of the applicant.

Apply via Fudan University:
Applicants can apply for both scholarships after they are preliminarily admitted. Applicants may submit the application for the scholarship together with the application for admission. Incoming (new) students can apply for the Chinese Government Scholarship (Class B) and Shanghai Government Scholarship (Classes A and B) at the same time.

Please visit http://sof.uchicago.edu/uchicago for more information.

Available Scholarships to non-degree students:

The Chinese government's scholarship (see http://en.csc.edu.cn):
The applicant should apply it independently via the website. In the application, the Ministry of Education might ask the applicant to assign an institution other than Fudan University.

Confucius Institute Scholarships:
The applicant should apply it via Confucius Institutes or the Chinese consulates in his or her home country.
* Both the above two scholarships cover the tuition fee, on-campus accommodation and living subsidy of the applicant.

Please visit http://sof.uchicago.edu to check all the available scholarships.

English-Taught Master’s Programme in Electronics and Communication Engineering

Programme Introduction
This programme was jointly initiated by Fudan University, China and the University of Turku (UTU), Finland. It is a 2.5-year full-time English-taught programme with an emphasis on Embedded Electronics. There are two optional tracks in this programme.

Track 1 (Double Master’s Degree)
Students who have been admitted by Fudan University aiming at getting double master’s degree can apply for the study right at UTU as well. UTU will select students based on their eligibility, study success (at Bachelor’s level) and interviews (in English). English proficiency is ensured during an interview. The selected students will have a mandatory one-semester (according to the current arrangement it is the second semester) exchange to UTU, Finland. After completing this programme, students will receive the Master of Engineering Degree from Fudan majoring in Electronics and Communication Engineering and the Master of Science Degree from UTU majoring in Information and Communication Technology.

Track 2 (Fudan Degree only)
Students in this track only study at Fudan for 2.5 years. After the completion of study, students will receive the Master of Engineering Degree from Fudan majoring in Electronics and Communication Engineering.

Tuition Fees
Tuition fee at Fudan is 97500 RMB/programme.
Tuition fee at UTU is 4000 Euro/programme for non-EU/EEA students (no tuition fee for EU/EEA students).
Students in Track 1 should pay tuition fees to both universities. Students in Track 2 only pay the Fudan tuition fee.

Course Requirement
The following courses are available in this programme. The list of courses may change slightly year by year.

Doctoral Program in International Politics (DPIP)
School of International Relations and Public Affairs, Fudan University, Shanghai, China

Introduction of SIRPA

Fudan University is a comprehensive university based in Shanghai, China’s most internationalized metropolitan city. It is a top university in the world, ranked at the 43rd place in the QS World University Rankings (2015-17). Its campus hosts the biggest group of foreign students in China.

The School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA) is a leading school in political and public affairs. Its Politics and International Studies ranked at the 34th place in the QS World University Rankings by subject (2017). Supported by its Interdisciplinary structure, strong international publications and exchanges, faculty resources and frontier research, SIRPA has been running several English-taught MA programs, including Chinese Politics and Diplomacy, Europe and Asia in Global Affairs (double degree with Science Po Paris), Chinese Government and Governance, Comparative Politics and International Public Policy, as well as one English-taught Ph.D. program in International Politics.

Introduction of the program

SIRPA has newly established an English-taught Doctoral Program in International Politics. The principal goal of the program is preparing scholars and practitioners with a solid theoretical foundation, rigorous research skills, and profound knowledge of both history and contemporary issues in the vitally important fields of public and international affairs. The program mainly enrolls foreign students, and all its academic courses are taught in English. The curriculum and doctoral dissertation work in the program center around the following thematic areas: International Relations Theory, History of International Relations, Great-power Diplomacy, Chinese Foreign Policy, International Organization, Comparative Politics, BRICS Study, International Political Economy, Global Governance, International Security and Religion, etc.

Applicants should have master’s degrees in related fields. The Doctoral Program in International Politics normally requires three to four years of work on courses and dissertation. The faculty members have diverse academic backgrounds, and many of them received their Ph.D. degrees abroad.

Application

The program admits degree students. Applicants should send the following application documents (2 sets, place documents of each set in right order as follows) to the International Office of SIRPA, Fudan University.

1. Printed online barcode Application Form with personal signature and a photo.
2. A copy of valid passport.
3. Certificates of a bachelor’s and master’s degree from an accredited international institution in a relevant discipline. Students must submit the documents in the original language as well as an official or certified English translation for each document. Students from countries in which English is the official language of instruction need submit only the English copies.
4. Transcripts of all correspondence after high school education. Students must submit transcripts in the original language as well as an official or certified English translation for each foreign language transcript. Students from countries in which English is the official language of instruction need submit only the English copies. A cumulative grade point average (GPA) equivalent to at least 80 on a 100 scale (0 grades on a 5.0 scale) in undergraduate and postgraduate coursework is required.
5. Statement of purpose. Describe in your statement of purpose your reasons for applying to the Ph.D. program and your preparation for this field of study, your research and study interests, future career plans and other aspects of your background and interests which may aid the program in evaluating your aptitude and motivation for Ph.D. study. The statement should not exceed 2 pages in length, single-spaced.

Core Courses

International Politics and Theories

This is a required course for students in the Doctoral Program in International Politics. This course is designed to assist students in acquiring knowledge about International Politics. The goal of the course is to provide students with a thorough understanding of International Politics from both theoretical and practical perspectives. It will focus on analyzing theories, i.e., different theoretical perspectives, on International Relations (IR); students are required to not only understand various IR theories, as well as their relations, but also employ these theories to describe and explain International Events.

Research Methods for Political Science

This is a required course for students in the program. It offers an in-depth introduction to both quantitative and qualitative research methods in political science. It is designed to equip students with knowledge and techniques for reading scholarly articles and conducting their own academic research. The course introduces the general principles for conducting political science research, some practical techniques for writing research proposals and research papers at Fudan University, and the major research methods for political science.

Research Design and Individual Study

The course aims to develop the student's ability to formulate researchable questions and appreciate different approaches to researching those problems. It also provides key theoretical concepts from one or more of the subdisciplines of International Relations, understand the relationship between theory testing and empirical evidence, and understand and apply a range of research methods. It also covers qualitative and quantitative research and the related methods of data collection, analysis, and interpretation.

Introduction

Chinese Politics and Diplomacy (CPD) is a two-year international master program that prepares students with theoretical tools, practical knowledge, and analytical capacity of Chinese politics and international relations. Taught by established professors and seasoned policy experts with global vision, the program distinguishes itself by its wide array of courses, unique academic atmosphere and first-hand observation of Chinese policies and politics. Students are expected to leave the program with considerable exposure to Chinese state institutions, political culture and diplomatic practices. Upon graduation, they can pursue further training in prestigious academic programs, as well as advance their careers to a wider range of public and private institutions around the globe, including national governments, international organizations, transnational corporations, think-tanks, and NGOs.

Starting from 2005, FUDU has established itself as one of the most prestigious English-taught graduate-level programs both at home and abroad. We accept both degree and non-degree students on a competitive basis. Throughout the decade, hundreds of international students have graduated from CPD program, who are now working in diplomatic, government offices, private managers and other profession. Besides, the program also offers a great opportunity for exchange or non-degree students to experience Chinese culture and politics.

Fudan-Sciences Po “Europe and Asia in Global Affairs”
Double Degree (DD) Program

Fudan University and SIRPA at a Glance

Founded in 1905, Fudan University has been one of the top universities in China and well-known in the world. Its name “Fudan”, literally meaning “heavenly light shining” day after day, indicates inexhaustible self-reliance and industriousness. It is located in a cosmopolitan global city, Shanghai, also an important economic center of China and the world.

Key figures of Fudan University:
28 schools and departments
31,000 full-time teachers and researchers
29,000 full-time degree students
9,000 foreign students

As one of 28 schools and departments at Fudan, School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA) is a leading school in international relations, political science and public administration in China. It aims to train the best talents for state and public affairs, and potential academics. The subject of international relations in SIRPA is ranked in the first list in China. It attracts hundreds of foreign students in different levels from undergraduate, master to PhD, and various exchange program participants.

Introduction of the DD Program

The Double Degree Program on Europe and Asia in Global Affairs was established by Fudan University and Sciences Po in 2010. It provides students who are interested in analysing European and Asian affairs from both comparative and international relations perspectives with the excellent research network between Fudan University and Sciences Po.

This program is aimed at European specialists who would like to deepen their understanding of Europe through comparing it to Asia, as well as specialists who aspire to strengthen their understanding of Asia in relation to other regions, at international relations specialises who are eager to acquire a more specific insight on the challenges and context of Europe-Asia relations.

The DD program lasts two academic years. The first year will be spent at Sciences Po in the Master Program of European Affairs, and the second year will take place within the School of International Relations & Public Affairs at Fudan University in the Master Program of International Politics. Students remain enrolled in both institutions for both years; they will therefore benefit from all the students’ services (free access to library, student unions, career services...). Courses are multidisciplinary and students will have International Relations, History, Economics, Law, and Political Science with focus on Europe and Asia in Global Affairs. Students will follow two language classes at Sciences Po, preferably chosen within Chinese, French and English. At Fudan, 20 courses will be offered in English, although non-Chinese students are highly recommended to learn Mandarin by taking Mandarin classes offered by the International Cultural Exchange School.

Assessment will be the same for both regular students enrolled in the school where the students study. A two-month internship is mandatory after the second semester, between June and September. At Fudan University students will write a master thesis. Final graduation will rely on the validation by the student of both years of the programme. Therefore, students get a temporary graduation in July at Sciences Po and graduate definitely once all the programme is validated at Fudan University in the following year.

More details about the DD program can be found at the Sciences Po website.
http://master.sciences-po.fr/en/content/dual-degree-fudan-university

Admissions

Candidates should apply directly via the Sciences Po website.[http://admissions.sciences-po.fr/]. Generally, applications must be completed by the end of March each year. Applications are administered centrally at Sciences Po when they will be examined by a joint admissions board comprising representatives from both the SIRPA, Fudan University and Sciences Po. Applicants will be notified by email and post (for admitted students).

Tuition Fees

Students pay the tuition fees in the university they actually study in, their host institution (Sciences Po for Year 1 and Fudan U for Year 2). Sciences Po: http://formation.sciences-po.fr/en/content/school-fees
Fudan University: RMB 80,000 Yuan

Supported by its interdisciplinary structure, strong international publications and exchanges, faculty resources and frontier research, SIRPA has been running several English-taught MA programs, including Chinese Politics and Diplomacy, Europe and Asia in Global Affairs (double degree with Science Po Paris), Chinese Government and Governance, Comparative Politics and International Public Policy, as well as one English-taught Ph.D. program in International Politics.

Introduction of the program

In response to the demand for policy analysts and practitioners with an international vision, SIRPA starts to build a two-year MA program in International Public Policy (IPP) in 2014. This program combines multiple strengths. First, China, after decades of rapid development, is now the world’s second largest economy. Besides proliferating domestic demands for policy experts, China has also been an active partner in global public affairs. Second, Shanghai is China’s economic capital and a vibrant global city. It has China’s first Free Trade Zone and will accommodate the headquarters of BRICS Development Bank.

The IPP program welcomes students with diverse academic background such as social sciences, natural sciences, and engineering, among others. The program emphasizes strong analytical capacities, quantitative skills, policy orientation, and an international vision. The training in IPP will prepare students for leadership and analytical positions in public, private, and nonprofit organizations in or out of China. It also sets solid foundation for further Ph.D. studies.

Highlights of the program

All courses except the Chinese language courses are taught in English. There are some distance learning courses co-organized with our international partners.

Most faculty members are Chinese with a Ph.D. degree from the west. There are also foreign faculty members.

The program is composed of half international students and half Chinese students.

Courses are designed with an interdisciplinary focus and a methodology focus.

Internship in local or foreign agencies is important for developing a policy design or a thesis.

Ample opportunities for international exchanges including double degree programs.

Training goals for students

- Grasp basic skills of policy analysis and program evaluation and have a solid knowledge of social science research methods.
- Have considerable understanding of certain issues in international public policy and can systematically analyze domestic and international public policies.
- Can independently carry out academic research and write professional articles and consulting reports.
- Have strong abilities to research and write on policy issues and to design and propose recommendations.

Admission

The program admits both degree and non-degree students.

For application procedures, please refer to the notice of International Students Office of Fudan University http://isf.fudan.edu.cn/notice.html

Endorsements

"Those from outside China can no longer afford to be ignorant about China. An experience at one of China’s top universities, with a long tradition of openness to international influences, is a fantastic opportunity for students from outside China. They will be interacting with some of China’s smartest young people, learning from professors who understand both Western and Chinese perspectives, and living in one of the most vibrant cities in the world. They will come out of the program with a better understanding of both China’s strengths and problems, and be in a good position to help build a more peaceful world.”

—Steve Kilmann, Weatherhead Professor of Public Management, Harvard University, John F. Kennedy School of Government, Editor of International Public Management Journal (IPMJ)

“This course looks set to become an essential prerequisite for serious students wanting to study public policies in and beyond China. It is timely and sets the Chinese trajectory of reform in the context of trends both across Pacific Asia and globally. The course offers a good balance of required and elective courses, access to high-quality faculty and is situated within a renowned School at Fudan University. Graduating students will gain important high-level skills both in research and policy analysis.”

—Stephen P. Dorussen, Professor and Chair of International Public Management at University of Edinburgh (UK) and Deputy Dean of the Business School, Editor of Public Management Review (PMR)

“There is a growing demand among international students to experience China and its view of global policies, but for whom acquiring full skills in Mandarin is out of reach. There is a growing demand among Chinese students to encounter foreign students and learning from their perspectives in solving global problems. Fudan University’s International Public Policy master programme offers both groups the perfect podium to fulfil their wishes. A two-year programme taught in English at a top university located in global city Shanghai, can anyone think of a more suitable alternative?”

—Martin de Jong, Professor of Public Policy, Delft University of Technology & Fudan University

Fudan-Sciences Po. “Communication and Media” Double Degree Program

Introduction

The Fudan-Sciences Po Double-degree program in Communication and Media was launched in 2011 in partnership with School of Communication at Sciences Po. The program enables students to study for one year at Sciences Po in Paris, and one year at Fudan School of Journalism, Shanghai. The aim of the program is to enhance the skills of media and communications professionals - through research, practical training and applied learning - in Chinese media, marketing, journalism and culture in order to enhance their knowledge of China, equipping them with a richer global perspective and media savvy so they can contribute a unique transnational perspective in their future professions.

The School of Journalism at Fudan University is known as the Cradle for Chinese Journalists, and has close link to the Chinese media industry. The school was founded in 1948, which is evolved from the Department of Journalism established in September 1929. With its close link to the Chinese media industry, Fudan Journalism School’s alumni have played significant role across the country as leading figures in the media industry. As the first higher education institution in China to commit to Journalism, currently, Fudan Journalism School consists of four departments including Department of Journalism, Broadcasting, Advertising, and Communications with 81 faculty members, and about 1500 students.

Admissions

Candidates shall apply directly through the Sciences Po at http://admissions.sciences-po.fr/
The application deadline is usually at early March each year. Applications are administered centrally at Sciences Po where applications are examined by a joint admissions board consisting of professors from both School of Journalism, Fudan University and Sciences Po.

Admission Requirement:

a. Language requirement
IELTS 7 with no sub-score less than 6.5 or TOEFL iBT 100

b. Academic qualification
Bachelor’s degree with honours, with a grade of first or upper second class, or equivalent in a related area. Professional experience, although desirable, is not an essential requirement.

c. Other documents needed:
CV; Personal Statement (1,000 – 1,500 words including academic interest, and study plan); 2 Reference Letters; GPA 3.5

EMA Program in Chinese Philosophy and Culture
Fudan University (Shanghai, China)

I. Academic Programs

Overview
These programs are aimed to offer opportunities of learning Chinese and studying Chinese philosophy to overseas postgraduates or college juniors and seniors who have not yet been able to master the Chinese language. In addition to Chinese language classes, these programs offer courses on Chinese philosophy as well as other related courses in English at Fudan University. Fudan University is a leading institution of higher education in China, and is experienced with and renowned for overseas students. The School of Philosophy at Fudan is a top philosophy program in China. The university is located in Shanghai, the most dynamic city of China that belongs to a region that is rich in Chinese traditions and cultures. It has been six years since these programs were launched in 2011, and 66 students have been enrolled in either the M.A. program (56 students) and the visiting student program (10 students). They are from the U.S., Canada, Puerto Rico, the U.K., Sweden, the Netherlands, Denmark, Germany, France, Spain, Italy, Ireland, Iceland, Poland, Romania, Yugoslavia, Montenegro, Russia, Israel, Turkey, India, Indonesia, and Gambia, and many of them are top students in their classes, majoring in philosophy, classics, and/or East Asian or Chinese studies. The above facts make these programs simply the most successful of their kind (English-based post-graduate programs in Chinese philosophy) in mainland China.

M.A. Program
This is a two-year degree program. The students who apply for the program should have a college degree from an accredited institution upon entering the program. The students are required to get at least 31 credits (8 credits for 3 courses in Chinese Language, 15 credits for five required major courses and 8 credits for electives courses) in order to graduate. A master’s thesis is also required for obtaining the master’s degree. Other than the above courses, students are also allowed to take courses that are offered by other departments at Fudan University (up to 6 credits per semester).

Visiting Student Program
This is a one-year program. The students who apply for the program should be postgraduate students or students who will be in their junior or senior years upon entering the program. The students must complete 3-4 major courses, and 1-2 courses of Chinese. Upon the completion of the program, the students will be given a certificate. Other than the above courses, students are also allowed to take courses that are offered by other departments at Fudan University (up to 6 credits per semester).

Audit Program
This program is based upon individual courses. The students must have a college degree, or a proof of active enrollment in an accredited college and the completion of their junior year of studies. A transcript of courses taken in this program will be offered upon request. If the students decide to pursue either of the above two programs later, these courses may be carried over.

II. Requirements for Master’s Degree Program

Chinese Language Courses
3 courses, and maximum of 6 credits will be counted toward your degree. If students take a 4-credit language course, only 2 credits out of the 4 will be counted toward the degree requirements. For students whose Chinese is so good that they don’t consider taking Chinese language courses necessary, these courses can be replaced with Chinese philosophy courses offered in Chinese.
EMA Program in Chinese Philosophy and Culture
Fudan University (Shanghai, China)

Students can choose any course from other departments.

Scholarly activities and practical training
4 credits
Students in the program are required to participate in lectures offered by visiting scholars and arranged by the program

Classical Chinese Tutorial
0 credit
One Chinese tutor will be assigned to every two foreign students in the program who have similar Chinese level. The tutor will meet with the two students for 2 hours every week during the semester, studying Classical Chinese together. The tutors are selected from Chinese graduate students at the School of Philosophy.

Thesis
Around 20,000 words and up with a 5,000 Chinese character summary
Students will discuss their thesis proposal at the end of their first year of studies. They will be required to defend their proposals at the end of September in the second year. The mid-term exam of their thesis will take place in the middle of December in the second year. The complete draft of their thesis will be submitted in the middle of March in the second year. The final defense takes place in June in the second year.

III. List of Faculty Members Who Regularly Teach Major and Elective Courses

Prof. EAL Tongdong (Program Director) holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from Boston University, and was a tenured associate professor at Xavier University in Cincinnati before he joined Fudan University in the rank of full professor. He was the first and so far the only tenured philosophy teacher from the U.S. who has returned to China as a full time faculty member. His research interests include Chinese philosophy and political philosophy, especially the comparative and contemporary relevance of traditional Chinese political philosophy. He has published many articles in some prestigious journals. In these areas, and has a book out in Chinese by the Fudan University Press, A New Vision of an Old State: The Comparative and Contemporary Relevance of Classical Confucian Political Philosophy. The English and revised version of this book is now under review for its publication in the English-speaking world. He has also published a book in English, an Introduction to Traditional Chinese Political Philosophy that is presented from a comparative perspective, showing its contemporary relevance (China: The Political Philosophy of the Middle Kingdom, 2nd Books). He has been invited to speak at many academic institutions all over the world.

Prof. CAI Qinghua holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. Her research interests include Daoism and Wei-Jin Xuanxue.

Prof. Eberhard Guhe studied Indology, logic and mathematics at the University of Münster as well as at the University of Vienna, where he passed his MA and PhD in Indology with a thesis on Indian logic. His teaching interests include Indian philosophy (especially logic).

Prof. Lawrence Lau studied at various institutions in Hong Kong, mainland China, and Canada before he obtained his PhD from the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. He has published widely in the studies of Buddhism.

Prof. Li Tianqiu holds a PhD from Fudan University under the supervision of Prof. ZHI Weicheng, one of the leading scholars in Confucian classical studies (Jingju) in China. He has been a visiting scholar to academic institutions all over the world. He has published both in Chinese and English, and has regularly taught courses in English. His research interests include Jingju (Confucian classical studies) and the cultural exchanges between China and the West.

Prof. Benoit Vermander holds M.A., Ph.D., and PhD from a few leading academic institutions from France, the U.S., and Taiwan. He has taught at Ferdhan University in New York, among other places. His research interests include political philosophy and Chinese spiritualities and religions.

Prof. CHANG Tsu-Li holds a Ph.D. from National Chengchi University. His research interests include Neo-Confucianism and comparative philosophy.

Prof. CHEN Jia holds a Ph.D. from UNH, and her research interests include Chinese aesthetics, aesthetics, and philosophy of education.

Prof. YU Zhijun holds a Ph.D. from the University of Leipzig, and his research interests include the sociology of religion, Chinese popular religions, and the philosophy of social sciences.

IV. Tuition and Living Expenses

Tuition for the M.A. and Visiting Student Programs is RMB 50,000 per year. Students are also required to cover other expenses while living in Shanghai. Rooms are available on campus international students dormitories, and the monthly rent for a single room (with a shared bathroom) ranges from RMB 1,350 per month to 2,700 per month. Meals at an on-campus dining facility cost less than RMB 1,000 per month.
V. Scholarships

Various types of scholarships are available:

1) Government Scholarships through Fudan. The Chinese and Shanghai government's fellowships will cover either the tuition only or the tuition and accommodation off-campus, as well as some living expenses. We have a great track-record of securing these fellowships for our applicants for the MA program. Please note, if you also apply for another MA program from another mainland Chinese university, and apply for full scholarship through it, the Chinese government will give you scholarship to go to one MA program decided by the Chinese government, and this scholarship cannot be carried to the program of your own choosing. That is, if you apply for two or more MA programs in mainland China, and apply for scholarships through them, you can only get governmental scholarship to one of the programs and you cannot control which program you can enroll with the scholarship.

2) Government Fellowship applied independently. The applicant, especially if he or she applies for the one-year visiting program (so far, no full scholarship is available to one-year visiting students through Fudan), can also apply for the Chinese Government Scholarship (CGS, http://en.csc.edu.cn), Confucius Institute Scholarships (through Confucius Institutes or Chinese consulates in the applicant's home countries), or other scholarships in his or her own. However, you must apply for the CGS on your own; the Ministry of Education may assign you to an institution not of your choosing, while applying for the CGS through Fudan (which is now only available to applicants for the MA program) will guarantee that you will come to Fudan.

3) Fudan University also offers Fudan Student Fellowships annually to second-year International Students based on a campus-wide competition that can cover part of the tuition, ranging from RMB 5,000 to 15,000/year.

4) The School of Philosophy offers RMB 5,000/semester to students who pay tuition out of their own pockets. Take a full-course load (4 courses/semester), and maintain a B+ average. No separate application is needed.

5) Yan Zhihong Scholarship. RMB 5,000. Only students who pay for the tuition are eligible, and no separate application is needed.

6) Teetle Scholarship. RMB 5,000. Only students who pay for the tuition are eligible, and no separate application is needed.

7) Other forms of fellowships may also become available in the near future.

8) In addition, help will be offered to students who wish to find part-time jobs (such as instructor for spoken English) to support their studies in these programs.

VI. Application

For students who wish to enroll in the fall semester in any given year (so far, no spring admission is available), the start date for applications is early December of the previous year. The priority deadline is February 19th of the same year as that of enrollment. Applications that are submitted after February 19th and before May 1st may be considered, but government fellowships through Fudan won't be available for students who fail to submit their applications before the priority deadline. The official admission results will be announced in late June or early July on this website: http://phy-fudan.edu.cn, and an admission package will be sent out after the announcements. A confirmation email can be sent to you earlier by request.

Application materials to be mailed:

(1) Register on-line and fill out the on-line form: http://admission.csoe.fudan.edu.cn. Upon approval, pay the application fee of RMB 800 (MA program) or RMB 400 (visiting and audit programs). Then, print out the application form, attach a photo to the form, and sign.

(2) A copy of passport.

(3) Mail the above materials to: Admissions Office, Room 101, International Students Office, Fudan University, 220 Handan Road, Shanghai 200433, China

Application materials to be uploaded to the on-line application system (no need to mail them):

(4) Official Transcripts from all post-secondary institutions attended (notarized English translations are needed if they are not originally in English) and the meaning of grades needs to be explained if it is different from the system commonly used in American colleges.

(5) Notarized copy of diploma(s) from all post-secondary institutions attended if applicable (notarized English translations are needed if they are not originally in English). For college seniors applying for the MA program, a letter from the university that claims that the student in question will graduate by September is needed, and the student needs to bring the diploma to Fudan upon registration.

(6) Two (2) letters of recommendation.

(7) Proof of English language proficiency if the student's native language is not English and the student hasn’t attended college(s) in which courses are taught in English. An IELTS score of 6.0 or higher on an IELTS test of 6.5 or higher is required. (If it is not the original copy, it needs to be notarized)

(8) A personal statement of less than 1,000 words (study and work experiences, academic achievements, research proposal, and career plan after the Fudan programs, etc.).

(9) A writing sample of less than 5,000 words.

(10) A list of scholarly works if applicable at that time in the second year.

Scholarship application through Fudan:

(11) After your application is received and reviewed, a preliminary decision will be made on whether you will be admitted. If preliminarily admitted, you will be notified and will be allowed to go on to fill out your scholarship application. The notification will be emailed to you in early March, and you need to submit your scholarship applications by April 10. For scholarship application, please check the website http://phy.fudan.edu.cn/engsch.htm for procedures. Pay particular attention to scholarships for new students. Only the Chinese Government Scholarship, Shanghai Government Scholarship (SGS) (Class A), and Shanghai Government Scholarship (SGS) (Class B) are applicable to the incoming (new) students. To apply for ALL OF THE THREE fellowships will increase your chance to get a fellowship.

Notice to be sent:

Please send an email informing us about your application to Prof. Bai, liaoning@fudan.edu.cn, Prof. CAI, Qinghua caqinghua@fudan.edu.cn, Prof. CHANG, Taoli taolih@gmail.com, and Prof. Yi, Yinping yinpingyi@fudan.edu.cn when you start your application, so that we can track the progress of your application from our side and offer you whatever help necessary.

I. Overview

In recent decades, discussion in public sphere and academic research about Chinese religions is becoming a cross-cultural phenomenon. In the tide of globalization and revitalization of faith, for the purpose of training experts in the future and promising young scholars in the field of Chinese religions, the School of Philosophy Fudan University resolves to launch a master program for Chinese religious studies in English, starting in Fall semester 2017, which is open for global application.

The School of Philosophy Fudan University has long-term cooperation and friendship with religious communities in Shanghai as well as in Mainland China. This program plans to organize regular visits for all students, and provides research possibilities, so that students are able to have direct encounter with living Chinese religions, besides understanding the theory and classifications.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND PUBLIC POLICY

Master of Chinese Society and Public Policy in English

PROGRAMME DESCRIPTION

About a fifth of all the people in the world live in China. At the same time as China has the longest continuous culture surviving from ancient times, globalization widely affects Chinese culture and society. And as a country, China will have big influence in the politics and economics of the twenty-first century. Chinese culture and society is undergoing dramatic changes in the era of globalization and transformation.

The two-year English-instructed master’s degree program in Chinese Society and Public Policy is a full time program, with five different program options, that provides rigorous training in sociology and social policy, covering a broad range of topics from sociology, anthropology, social policy and demography. By choosing this program students will get the opportunity to take courses taught by some of China’s leading sociologists and be part of an academic environment that prides itself on being on the forefront of sociology & public policy research. The program provides an excellent opportunity for students with little or no Chinese language skills to develop a deep understanding of China in the modern world.

The program is taught at the prestigious School of Social Development and Public Policy (SSDPP) of Fudan University. The School is one of the global strongholds in the teaching and research in sociology and social development studies. The SSDPP has over 60 full time faculty members. Majority of them received their PhD degrees from overseas universities such as Harvard University, LSE, Princeton University, University of Chicago, Duke University, University of Washington-Seattle, Chinese University Hong Kong and so on. Its international cooperation extends to such partners as Harvard University, London School of Economics and Political Science, Columbia University, UC Berkeley, University of Hong Kong, National University of Singapore, University of Oslo, Lund University and many other. Ten percent of the School’s students are international students, from the US, Canada, Japan, UK, Germany, France, the Nordic countries, the Netherlands, etc.

Currently the SSDPP operates two English-instructed Dual Degree master programs:
1) Master Program in Social Policy, with Washington University In St.Louis
2) Master Program in Development Studies, with Lund University

APPLICATION PROCEDURE

Log on website (http://admission.iso.fudan.edu.cn/) to register and complete the application form online.

DURATION

Depending on the different demands of students, English-instructed Master Program in Chinese Society and Public Policy (EMAP) can be either semester course or degree course.

In terms of degree students, EMAP consists of a two-year full-time course study. The first year of the program is designed to provide a solid grounding in Chinese culture, society and issues of social development. The third semester of the program provides research opportunity on China. Master students are required to complete and defend an MA thesis.

In terms of non-degree students, EMAP can be 3-2 semester programme. It will allow students to have the opportunity to not only study Mandarin and experience Chinese culture and local people, but also to earn credits from courses on postgraduate level at one of the top universities in Asia.

Scholarships:
Students may be qualified for Chinese government scholarship or Shanghai government scholarship. Students supported by scholarship will be waived the program tuition.

For more details about the scholarship, please refer to http://www.iso.fudan.edu.cn/xuewei.htm

Joint Degree Programme of Fudan University and University College Dublin (UCD)
MSc Software Engineering (Professional Degree)

Fudan University

The Software School of Fudan University, founded in 2002, is one of the original 37 national demonstration software schools. By design, the school is to cater to the needs of the information technology training in the Internet era, and put efforts to build a comprehensive curriculum that ranges from underlying system software to application layer and business applications. Today, the school is home to a software engineering laboratory, a broadband network and interactive multimedia laboratory, an e-commerce research center, an interactive graphics lab, a parallel processing institute, a cryptography and information security research lab, a public performance and information technology research center, a CC-CMM International standard research center, a data analysis and security laboratory, and other research labs.

The Fudan MSc in Software Engineering programme offers systematic training for students who want to start a career of engineers and managers in IT and Internet industry. The programme provides a series of specialized courses such as Formal Program Construction, Practical Software Development, Electronic Commerce, Advanced Database, Advanced Topics in Software Engineering, Requirements Engineering, and Distributed Computing. All courses are taught in English by lecturers from Fudan and UCD.

University College Dublin

Ireland is home to the world’s top 10 technology companies. It is known as the Internet and Games Capital of Europe and is among the world’s most technologically developed nations. There are excellent job opportunities, with 5,000 job vacancies in the sector at present.

The UCD MSc in Software Engineering is a uniquely flexible and innovative programme. It offers a negotiated learning (NL) modus for students with an ICT background that allows students to customize their learning paths and to tailor what they learn to their own specific needs and career aspirations. Module choices include several programming languages, cloud computing, bioinformatics, data mining, machine learning and robotics.

Once accepted into the programme, students will be guided through a training needs assessment to establish their prior experience, personal knowledge gaps and career plans. The students have the option to select modules with a very specific thematic focus or they may select modules from one of the pre-defined thematic streams covered by the programme. The current module offerings can be explored by visiting http://www.csl.ucd.ie/content/module-offerings

Joint Degree Programme of Fudan University and University College Dublin

Fudan University and UCD wish to provide students with a joint programme allowing credit transfers between Fudan and UCD contributing to the award of a Master of Software Engineering from Fudan University and Masters Degree of Software Engineering from UCD. Fudan and UCD have been working closely together for over 33 years providing an international dimension to education.
Joint Degree Programme of Fudan University and University College Dublin (UCD)
MSC Software Engineering (Professional Degree)

Training Methods

Study Period: two and a half years.

The joint programme consists of three parts:
One year of study at Fudan University to finish all the courses required for Fudan degree, which include at least 39 UCD-equivalent credits that are taught by UCD staff or approved by UCD, and will be accredited in Phase 2 by UCD,

One year of study at UCD to finish all the courses required for UCD degree. Practical training experience at UCD is accredited by Fudan.

A half-year at either UCD or Fudan for the preparation and defense of a thesis for the Fudan degree.

Highlights

This joint programme will provide a systematic arrangement of specialized practice (industrial practice or academic practice) for each student. Each student is required to make a plan for practice arrangement in his/her first term in Fudan and complete the practice arrangement in the following periods at Fudan and UCD. An industrial practice arrangement includes an integrated internship in IT or Internet companies that have research and development centers in both Ireland and Shanghai. An academic practice arrangement includes one or more research or engineering projects that are co-advised by Fudan professors and UCD professors.
